TEIS WEIES

THE "B. R." SUMMER SPORTS HANDBOOK!

The Great Saturday Sports Journal

" TT E-he's a telegraph-pole!" Bob

Lawson minor interjected.

The Third Form at Pelham had just been dismissed from class, and were standing outside the hall. The above remarks had been passed on the person and form of a thin youth for the porter was staggering along behind pine admitted, eyeing the lanky form as it vanished into the Head's private entrance.

"Who is it? Does anybody know?"

He was evidently a new-comer to the school,

"Doesn't look much of an athlete," Macal-

"I fancy his name is L. Stow," Jack Noble

"L. Stow, eh?" echoed Bob. "Well, that's "Ha, ha! Good idea! That's the ticket,

And then and there, before he had even been

To the surprise of the Third-Formers, they found that the new-comer was placed in their

Form. He was at least head and shoulders taller than any of the others, and looked strangely out of place seated in the second row beside Macalpine and Murphy, who were, per-

Taking advantage of such intervals as Mr.

Slaney, the Form-master, gave him, the Scot's | back proceeded to question the fellow by his haps, the two shortest members of the Form.

"Been to a public school before?"

introduced to his future schoolmates, Leonard

Stow had his nickname bestowed on him.

said. "I saw a notice up on the board this morning, stating that a fellow of that name not a bad name, either. I suppose L. stands

"More like a lamp-post!"

Russell cried.

who had just passed them.

him bearing a huge tin trunk.

would probably join to-day."

"How old are you?"

"Nothing much."

"Can you do anything?"

"Thirteen."

" No."

for Lanky."

side.

THE 1st CHAPTER.

A Side-Splitting Complete Yarn of Jack Noble and Pelham School.

"What's your speciality?"

"Minding my own business!"

This last reply made the fiery Macalpine fume a little, and, on the whole, his whispered cross-examination was not very successful.

In the gym. that evening the Third Form had proofs that their nickname was more than suitable. Stow, dressed in immaculate gymnastic outfit, wandered into the gym. building.

"My hat, look at him! There's arms for you!" gasped Bob.

"It strikes me he has been doing a fast for forty days!" Noble breathed, gazing at the thin arms and scraggy neck of the newcomer. "It looks as if a good dinner wouldn't do

The Lordly Clifford Tries a Bit of Bounce. him any harm." But if Stow was lean, he was also devoid of nervousness. He crossed the floor of the gym. apparently unaware of the stir which his appearance created, and, picking up a pair of the lightest dumb-bells he could find, proceeded to go through a very tired, lackadaisical exer-

> He would pause about every second and bend his arm up; then he would gaze at the place where his muscle ought to have appeared. The calm, unconcerned way in which he did this told Noble that there was more in the long chap than his chums imagined.

> "Look here, Mac," he whispered, drawing the footballer aside, "that chap isn't such a fool as he looks."

> "I'm just beginning to think the same," said Mac, eyeing Stow's proceedings interestedly. "He's a wonderful amount of nerve, in the first place. I don't think I ever saw a fellow so absolutely cool on his first day."

> The door of the gym. was flung open, and Clifford, the bully junior captain, swaggered in, followed by Bayne and Marker.

Clifford was dressed in a howling blazer of red and yellow stripes, with the school crest worked on the left breast. He looked no end of a pot, and evidently fancied himself not a

"Oh, people, gaze at Cliffy!" said Bob. "Isn't he toffish this evening?"

"A perfect duke!" murmured Valance. Clifford heard the remarks, and his sallow face went a shade paler; but the Third Form were there in numbers, and so he treated them with discreet contempt.

Suddenly Marker stopped and sniggered. "Great Scott!" he said. "What's that?" His finger pointed to the lanky new-comer, who was still practising his weird exercise.

Clifford wheeled and glanced at Stow. "It-it looks like a bunch of tape!" he said. "Is it alive?" "Don't think so," said Bayne, backing up his leader in his usual fashion. "I think it's the skeleton from the anatomy-room!"

The remarks had been passed in tones loud enough to be heard by everyone in the gym.; but Stow never even fluttered an eyelash, continuing to raise and lower his dumb-bells without pause.

This quiet ignoring of his wit rather exasperated the Shell captain. He stalked towards Stow, and, halting within a few feet of him, ran his eyes slowly up the attenuated form.

Stow, thanks to his height, was able to see over Clifford's head, and kept his eyes fixed on the roof. Apparently he was not even aware of the junior captain's presence.

A faint titter went round the Third-Formers at the quaint tableau. Feeling that he was getting the worst of it, Clifford stepped forward and reached out to tap the new-comer on his bony chest.

Thud!

Stow's frail-like arm swung out, and the dumb-bell caught Clifford on the ribs with a force which fairly made him grunt. "You-you long ass!" he howled, staggering back, while a roar of laughter pealed up. Stow halted in his physical culture, and lowered his eyes for the first time. The astonishment which came into his face was delightful to see.

"I-I beg your pardon!" he said politely. "Did I strike you?"

As he had well-nigh winded the Shell captain, this remark was somewhat superfluous. Clifford's face went red with rage.

"Strike me, you fool?" he howled. "Of course you did! Do you want me to knock | the lean features above him. "We don't play your head off?"

"Oh, dear, no!" said Stow. "I really don't think I'd like you to do that."

The words were spoken quickly, but Noble observed that there wasn't the slightest trace of fear in the tones. He chuckled to himself as he edged forward so that he would not miss a word of the conversation.

"Then you'd better look out!" said Cliffy heatedly. "D'you know who I am?"

"Somebody important, I should think!" said Stow, peering with marked respect at the gaudy blazer.

Despite the sincerity of the tone, Clifford felt, in a dim sort of way, that the lanky chap was laughing at him. This did not increase his composure.

"I am captain of the Lower School," he said. "Clifford is my name."

"Did you say Stiffard?" Another titter went round.

"Clifford-Clifford, you wooden-headed image!" howled the proud possessor of that

"Oh, I see-Clifford. How do you do,

Transferring a dumb-bell into his left hand, Stow held out a long, knuckly fist. Even this simple action did not seem to please the Shell

"I don't shake hands with fags!" he said. "What's your name?"

The imperturbable new-comer dropped his proffered hand to his side. "My name is Stow," he said-"Leonard

Stow. "You don't seem to have stowed much in your time. You're a perfect bag of bones, man!"

Stow gazed complacently at his thin frame. "Not very beefy, am I?" he said easily. "But it's all right for my profession, you

"Your profession? What's that?" "Chimney-sweep," said the Third-Former. "That's what my dad is. He's made a pot of money out of it, too." "Isn't he a cool customer?" Noble whispered. "My hat, there's something in that fe'low! Clifford'll get no change out of him.'

Realising that personalities would not arouse his butt, the Shell bully tried other tactics. This was a favourite game of Clifford's-the ragging of any new hand. He knew that in a week or so-thanks to the friendly advice of Jack Noble and the sturdy Third-Formers-Stow would ignore his authority, so he had to make hay while the sun shone.

"What are you good at? Can you fight?"

"No fear!" "Can you run?"

"I-I believe I could run if there was somebody after me."

"Don't you try to be funny, my son!" Clifford snapped. "I want to find out if you're going to be any use to the Lower School at all. Do you mean to say you're no good at any sort of games?"

Stow raised his eyes to the ceiling, and seemed to ponder deeply. "Well, it's a bit risky," he said at last, "but I tell you what I'll do. I'll give you a man at draughts."

"Ha, ha, ha!"

"My hat, that's rich!" "Take him on, Cliffy!" chortled Russell. you fathead?" "Draughts-draughts, bawled the junior captain, shaking his fist at draughts here; that's a kid's game!"

"Oh, I like it!" said Stow placidly. "Itit doesn't make you sweat much."

"Look here, you hold your jaw, and listen! From what I can make out of it, you're no capture for the school, and you'll have to buck up-do you hear? We don't want slackers at Pelham, you know."

"I-I suppose you're extra good at things?" the lanky fellow said quietly.

"Rather!" Russell put in.

The Third-Formers had now gathered in a wide ring around Stow and Clifford.

"Old Cliffy's a champion footballer, isn't he, chaps?'

"Oh, one of the best!"

"May be capped for his country at any minute now." "If I couldn't play better than some of you worms," the exasperated captain bawled, "I'd go and hang myself!" "Then you play football?" said Stow.

"What position? "Cliffy's centre-forward of our juniors," a fag made haste to declare, "and he's done so (Continued on the next page.)

EAGUE CIRCH

Being a Weekly Record of THE BOYS' REALM Football League. TABLES (TOP CLUBS ONLY) UP TO WEEK ENDING APRIL 2nd.

"THE BOYS' REALM" FOOTBALL LEAGUE. NORTHERN SECTION. JUNIOR SECTION.

P. W. L. D. F. A. Pts.

High Street Juniors 24 24 0 0 207 16 48 Winwick Juniors .. 24 24 0 0 195 Creswick Albions .. 24 24 0 0 148 Greenside Celtics .. 24 24 0 0 162 22 48 SENIOR SECTION. Otter Rovers ... 24 24 0 0 162 21 48
Alexander Swifts ... 24 24 0 0 87 9 48

SOUTHERN SECTION. JUNIOR SECTION. P. W. L. D. F. A. Pts. Pear Tree U. .. 24 24 0 0 194 18 48 Annfield Plain .. .. 24 24 0 0 170 8 48

SENIOR SECTION. P. W. L. D. F. A. Pts. Pear Tree A. .. .. 24 24 0 0 172 St. Mary's U. .. 23 23 0 0 209 New Locos. .. 22 22 0 0 198

NORTH LONDON SECTION. JUNIOR SECTION.

P. W. L. D. F. A. Pts. St. John's Juniors .. 24 24 0 0 201 11 48 St. Thomas' 2nd. .. 24 24 0 0 184 7 48 Paddington Albions .. 24 24 0 0 146 11 48 SENIOR SECTION.

P. W. L. D. F. A. Pts. Berry's Diamond ... 24 22 1 1 123 21 45
Vincent ... 22 22 0 0 147 11 44
Shepherd's Bush ... 23 21 1 1 121 17 43

SOUTH LONDON SECTION.

JUNIOR SECTION. P. W. L. D. F. A. Pts. W. Greenwich ... 24 23 0 1 148 29 47 Christ Church ... 24 23 1 0 195 21 46 Southfield Rovers .. 24 23 1 0 166

SENIOR SECTION. P. W. L. D. F. A. Pts. St. Columba ... 24 21 0 3 128 18 45 Globe Albions ... 20 16 1 3 77 25 35 SCOTS AND IRISH SECTION. JUNIOR SECTION. P. W. L. D. F. A. Pts. St. Vincent's ... 24 24 0 0 129 15 48 Camelon Vics. ... 24 24 0 0 134 29 48 Castle U. .. .. 24 24 0 0 115 14 48 SENIOR SECTION. P. W. L. D. F. A. Pts. Mayflower .. .. 24 24 0 0 154 10 48 Avondale .. .. 24 24 0 0 133 11 48 Glenfield .. .. 21 21 0 0 128 Albion Vics. .. .. 19 19 0 0 89 10 38

Prize Football Winners for Week Ending April 2nd.

"NOTTS FOOTBALL NEWS" LEAGUE. JUBILEE RANGERS F.C .- C.o. League Secretary, W. M. Lambert, Lambert Cottage, Talbot Street, Nottingham.

MANCHESTER AND SALFORD DISTRICTS LEAGUE.

HEATH UNITED F.C .- C.o. League Secretary, P. D. Perris, 18, Bushton Street, Harpurhey, Manchester. EASTERN SUBURBAN FOOTBALL LEAGUE. ST. MICHAEL'S LEAGUE OF HOPE F.C.-Hon. Secretary, P. G. Peterson, 10, Montreal Buildings, Cotton Street, Poplar, E.

CATTON AND DISTRICT LEAGUE. MAGDALEN ROAD JUNIORS F.C .- Hon. Secretary, T. E. Jennings, 77, Beaconsfield Road, Magdalen Road, Norwich.

ANNFIELD PLAIN MINOR LEAGUE.

KYO UNITED F.C.-C.o. League Secretary, J. Flynn, Annfield Place, Annfield Plain, S.O. CHORLTON AND DISTRICT LEAGUE. CHEADLE CONG. F.C .- C.o. League Secretary, T. Lord, 46, York Street, C.-on-M., Manchester.

HELIP NULLE.

QUEEN'S CADETS (C Co.) (average age 16, weak) require matches home and away; all dates open. Ground, Parliament Hill.-Apply to Hon. Secretary, 28, Tonbridge Houses, Tonbridge Street, W.C. ST. JOHN'S C.C. (average age 14-16, weak) want matches for coming cricket season; all dates open .-Apply to Hon. Secretary, L. Julian, 10, Telford Road, West Hendon, N.W.

HAWTHORN VILLA C.C. (average age 15) have all dates open, and would be glad to arrange matches within three miles' area. - Apply to Hon. Secretary, F. Jerabek, 39, Goth Street, West Derby Road, Liverpool.

ROTHERHITHE BAKERS' C.C. require Thursday matches, afternoon or evening, home or away. Holiday matches also wanted .- Apply to Hon. Secretary, S. E. Marriott, 20, Hawkstone Road, Rotherhithe, S.E. open.-Apply to Hon. Secretary, G. F. Sterrett, 93, Asylum Road, Peckham, S.E.

ST. JOHN'S JUNIORS C.C. (weak) would like to arrange matches with junior teams under the age of 16; only juniors between 14 and 16 need apply. Some singles accepted. Ground, Brockwell Park .-Apply to Hon. Secretary, C. Higgins, 14, Claribel Road, Brixton, S.W.

THE "G. W. JOHNSON YOUNG ABSTAINERS" C.C. (average age 14, weak), require away matches for | wanted to join cricket club. - Apply to Hon. Secretary, the following dates: May 14th; June 11th, 25th; July 9th; August 7th, 21st, 28th; September 3rd. Must be within three miles' radius of Elephant and Castle.—Apply to Hon. Secretary, E. Newton, 65, want guarantee matches away, London, Newcastle, Henshaw Street, Walworth, S.E.

ALEXANDRA WEDNESDAY C.C. (average age 15) want home and away matches within three miles radius of Leeds; all dates open. Also a few boys | Street, Nottingham. wanted; none over 15 need apply. - Apply, by letter

Road, Hyde Park, Leeds. THE REDS C.C. (average age 15, medium) require | Moore, 30, Marchmont Street, Russell Square, W.C. special away match, within a radius of eight miles of | ELMHURST F.C. require boys to join; small Upper Kennington Lane, Vauxhall, S.E.

THESE ARE INSERTED FREE OF CHARCE EITHER HERE OR IN "THE BOYS' REALM" FOOTBALL LIBRARY. ST. PETER'S C.C. (average age 16-17) want away matches, any dates.-Apply to Hon. Secretary, C. Snell, 232, Haydon's Road, Wimbledon.

BOROUGHMUIR C.C. 2nd XI. (average age 14) want matches; all dates open.-Apply to Hon. Secretary, John Calderwood, 35, Comely Bank Road, Edinburgh.

ST. PAUL'S C.L.B. (average age 13, weak) have all dates open for coming season.—Apply to Hon. Secretary, Q. M. S. Fenge, 174, Old Street, City Road, E.C. TWO RESPECTABLE YOUTHS (ages 151 and 161) wish to join a successful cricket club (local). Heights 5ft. 7in.; strong and reliable.—Apply to E. A. W., 29, Lichfield Road, East Ham. LAD (age 16) wishes to join a respectable cricket club in or near Islington for coming season. Willing INVICTA C.C. (average age 15½, medium) to pay subscription.—Apply, giving particulars, to require matches for the coming season; all dates D. W., Linton Villas, 13, Linton Street. Islington, N. YOUTH (age 17) wishes to join cricket club, as paying member, within easy reach of City.—Apply to

D. M., 47, Howland Street, St. Pancras, W. STAMFORD HILL ST. JOHN'S (average age 16, medium) has vacancies for two members. Small entrance fee and subscription.-Apply to Hon. Secretary, Geo. R. Palmer, 20, Brampton Road, Harringay, A FEW RESPECTABLE LADS (ages 18-20) E. Field, 131, Southampton Street, Camberwell, S.E.

"FOOTBALL NEWS" LEAGUE, Nottingham, Ireland, and elsewhere. Strong senior and junior teams. Excellent credentials.—Apply to Hon. Secretary, Wm. M. Hayward, Lambert Cottage, Talbot

EAST MARYLEBONE F.C. (average age 17) only, to Hon. Secretary, Percy Emmett, 14, Alexandra | require away matches for next season. Also few players wanted .- Apply to Hon. Secretary, Alick J.

Vauxhall, for August Bank Holiday .- Apply to subscription weekly. Ground, Finsbury Park and Hon. Secretary, G. MacKnight, 7, Farnham Royal, Hampstead .- Apply, at 9.30 p.m., to Hon. Secretary, C. Howard, 60, Benwell Road, Holloway.

See "The Boys' Herald"—1d. Now on Sale, Everywhere! "Ben Bold at Bay" Will Make You Merry for three months!"

perfectly truthful statement. With the excep- [ Clifford. tion of four draws, the junior team's record during the latter part of the season had been of relief. He wondered what it meant at the one long succession of dismal defeats.

Stow leaned forward a trifle, and fixed his eyes on Clifford's face.

"I've a good mind to tackle you at football," he said slowly, "only it would have to be under my conditions."

"You-you? Why, I'd take you on any time, anywhere, and any place!" Clifford | circle. bawled, gazing scornfully at the pipe-stem limbs. "You name your conditions, and I'll be ready for you."

"Good!" said Stow. "I'll let you know all | about it presently."

With a distinct feeling that he had come off | Clifford wheeled towards his rival. second-best, Clifford turned away, and stalked out of the gym. Several of the third eleven footballers, their curiosity aroused by Stow's words, gathered around the new-comer, and hinted very openly that they would like to the rather thick skull of the Shell captain for hear more of the challenge; but Lanky several seconds. When it did so, he nearly lost had arranged his dumb-bells again, and began | his balance as he barged forward. to go through his exercises.

"Can't tell you now," he said. "It's a howled. "What do you mean by that?" secret. I am a stranger, you see, and I want to find out my friends first."

Formers here!"

Stow only shook his head. "No," he muttered. "I'll tell you when I'm on the furious face with calm contempt.

ready, and not a minute before." "He's an obstinate worm!" Bob remarked, when he and Noble and Mac left the gym., and sauntered back to their study. "I think he might have told us."

"Mon, I canna blame him," the Scot's back put in.

Stow's caution appealed to the canny northerner.

"Ye see, what he says is the truth. He doesn't know his friends from his enemies yet, and it's not likely he's going to give himself away."

Jack laughed. "Look here, Bob," he said, "you can take it from me that that fellow knows what he's doing. He's the coolest beggar ever I saw. He was simply taking a rise out of Clifford the whole time. His father a chimney-sweep! Ha, ha, ha!" "Yes, that was a bit rich," Bob agreed. "I've just seen his kit-he's sleeping in my dorm., you know-and it's a ripper! It must have cost him pounds."

"He tipped Snark a half-crown," Noble remarked, "and drew out a handful of money to do it, too. It doesn't sound much like a chimney-sweep's son, does it?"

"Weel," Mac put in finely, "I like the look of him. He's thin, but he's got a rare pair of steady eyes. If he isn't a worthy addition to our Third Form, I'm a Dutchman!"

About an hour before "lights out" a knock sounded on Noble's study door, and Stow, with a small hamper under his arm, came into the room.

"I've found this in my box," he said, with a quiet grin. "I don't know who on earth it belongs to, but it's perishable stuff, and I'd like you chaps to give me a hand to shift it."

He deposited the basket on the table, threw back the lid, and commenced to bring out such a show of delicacies in the food line as made the witnesses' mouths water. A veal-and-ham patty, pies of a golden brown, glass jars containing jellies, long rolls of Vienna bread. Russell dashed to the door and turned the key in the lock.

"We-we don't want anyone to come in here just yet," he said. "They-they might claim the basket. You said you found it, Stow?"

"That's so, my son," the new-comer murmured, seating himself at the table. "But it was at the bottom of my trunk. Now, then, wire in!"

And right nobly did his guests obey his demand.

"I've been having a look round," Stow said, during the meal, fixing his eyes on Jack, "and I've found out a few things. One of 'em was who are the best men to trust."

The three Third-Formers turned towards him. The lanky lad eyed each of them in turn. "You don't like Clifford?" he said slowly.

"Not much! He's a beast!" "I thought so. Well, if you'll just keep it dark, I'll promise you he'll have a rare takedown within the next week or so." "We'll be as dumb as oysters," said Bob.

THE 2nd CHAPTER. Stow Explains His Plan.

FIN HE violent wave of the roller-skating craze which has spread over England out a champion at everything." during this last year had not failed to wide strip of asphalt running from the gym. to | not you, Jackson. You're always shoving your the cycle-shed, and here, of an afternoon, the oar in where it's not wanted."

Noble and Macalpine, swinging down the stairs | second challenge of yours." joined by Lanky.

"I heard you fellows were cranky on roller- let's see what you can do." skating," he said. "I think I'll come and have !

a look at you."

"Can you skate?" "Oh, a little!" said the long chap evasively; standard."

for a pair." The rattle of the wheels on the asphalt came | "Silly asses!" growled the junior, turning plainly to their ears long before they reached round painfully, and swinging off.

well this year that they haven't won a match | the rink. There were at least some twenty or thirty Pelhamites disporting, and among them Another titter of laughter went round at this | the Third-Formers picked out the face of Noble heard Stow give vent to a faint sigh time; but presently, when he and Mac went off together, he soon forgot all about it.

Stow leaned against the wall of the gym. lazily, and watched the rinkers as they passed. Here and there were one or two fairly skilful exponents, but for the main part the skaters were content to go round and round in a steady

Presently the Shell captain, his arms waving asked. to and fro, came sailing around one corner, and caught sight of the lounging Third-Former. It was the first time they had met since their little exchanges in the gym. True to his nature,

"I suppose you don't even rink?" he said.

"You are a rotten slacker!" "No, I don't rink," said Stow. "Do you?" The sarcasm in the remark did not strike into

"None of your sauce, you-you owl!" he

"By what?" "Oh, you know jolly well what I mean! "But you might give us a hint, old chap!" | You're trying to be funny, that's what you are. Russell protested. "Hang it, we're all Third- You're asking for a thick ear, and you'll get it!" Stow never even moved from his lounging position against the wall. His eyes were fixed

Stow watched his very amateurish progress, and a grim, slow smile spread over his face. "I've got you, you bumptious beast!" he thought. A day or so later Stow entered Jack's study with a parcel under his arm. On removing the wrapper a fine pair of ball-bearing skates were revealed. The wheels had been worn well down, and it was evident that their wearer was no new hand at the game, for Jack's quick eye saw that the outside rims of the wheels were ground down into slants, proving that the one who wore them was beyond the beginner stage. "What do you think of 'em-eh?" Stow

"They're a pair of beauties," said Jack admiringly; "and they weren't bought yesterday, either. Are they yours?"

"Yes," said Stow. Then, placing his skates on the table, he looked up at the Third-Former and smiled.

"These things are going to help me to give Cliffy a thundering good show-up," he said. Then, placing his fingers in his waistcoat pocket, he withdrew a small gold badge, and, turning the reverse side upward, he handed it across to the third eleven captain. "Just read that first," he said.

"First prize for fancy and trick skating: L. Stow," Jack murmured, reading the words | along the flap.

slipped it back into his pocket. "I won that last month," he said. "I've been at the game for a couple of years. I was captain of the hockey team in my town."

The ball sprang from Lanky's toe like a live thing, and, catching Clifford full in the face, sent him staggering back through his own goal.

"I simply asked you if you could rink," he said. "That's a fair question, isn't it?"

"It's a beastly impertinent question," snapped Clifford. "Of course I can rink. I'd rink a fellow like you off his blooming head!" "Good!" said Stow lazily. "That's two things that you can knock spots off me atfootball and rinking-eh?"

"Yes, and another dozen lot of things besides, too," the lordly Clifford voiced. There were three or four Fourth-Formers standing close to the wall, and they had been listening to the remarks which had passed.

Stow turned and nodded towards one of them. "You heard what Clifford said?" he asked. Jackson, the Fourth-Former addressed, do that?"

nodded his head and grinned. "Oh, yes, I heard the modest Clifford," he put in. "But that's nothing new for him. If you believe all he tells you, he'll make himself "Never mind whether I'm champion or not," reach Pelham School. There was a Clifford snarled. "I'm talking to this fellow, Cliffy. "Go and put on your skates now, and of public entertainment of it." "No fear!" said the lanky Third-Former. had time to refuse my challenge; and, of course,

"I'm not ready for you yet. I'll want a lot of I've told you all about the thing, and you've practice, no doubt, before I come up to your naturally thought it was O.K."

"but I haven't brought my skates with me. There was nothing particularly funny in the I'll have them here in a day or two. I've sent | remark, according to Clifford's idea, yet everyone standing beside the wall grinned at it.

"My hat, you were?" Jack said admiringly. "That's a risky game!"

"Not when you know how," Stow said easily. "But I haven't come to talk about that now.

It's Clifford I'm after." "Well?"

"This is what I'm going to do. He said that he could knock spots off me at football and rinking. Well, I'm going to issue a challenge to him to play me at football on roller-skates."

"Ha, ha, ha! I say, what a ripping wheeze!"

"The only thing I'm afraid of," the lanky fellow went on, "is that the beggar bobs down at the last minute. Do you think he's likely to

"That's about his game," Jack admitted. "But I think I'll be able to work it for you. We'll have to make sure that the whole school knows about the challenge; then the beggar will simply be afraid to climb down."

"How will you manage that?" Stow said. Jack thought for a moment.

"I've got it," he said, at last. "Look here, you write the challenge to-night, and get it Pelhamites were wont to gather to practice. "I just | delivered to Cliffy; then, to-morrow morning, as | tain's sallow face, and the grins and nods which About four days after Stow had arrived, | wanted to make sure that I had a witness to this | soon as class is over, I'll fix up a big notice on the board, calling the attention of the Third with their skates dangling by their sides, were I "You can have fifty, if you like," snapped Form to the business. You know, make a sort

"That's A 1," said Stow. "He won't have

"That's the wheeze exactly," said Jack. "You see, I'm captain of the Third Form, and is of interest to my own crowd."

pen, I'll scrawl out the challenge now."

"Here you are," said Jack. "Fire away!" Stow sat down and scribbled for a few moments; then, having dried the sheet, he picked it up, and read out the contents:

"To H. Clifford, Esquire, Captain of the Lower School, Pelham.

"Sir,-Having been challenged by you on two separate occasions to test my skill at football and rinking against yours, I hereby formally take up that challenge. Not wanting to take two bites at a cherry, I suggest we combine the two together. I will play you a game at football on roller-skates. Each of us will have a goal to protect, and the field will be the asphalt. I will be ready for you on Wednesday afternoon, at two o'clock.' (Signed) LEONARD STOW."

"Ripping!" said Jack. "Just let me take a note of the date, and then you can stow it away in an envelope, and get it delivered at once."

Bayne and Marker were with Clifford in his study when the little First-Former employed by Stow as a messenger threw the letter in at the open door and bolted.

"It's for you, Cliffy," Marker said, as he picked up the missive.

"Me? Who the dickens is it from, I wonder?" Clifford muttered, as he ran his thumb

The two Fourth-Formers, watching him as he The lanky youth reached for the badge, and | read, saw the sallow face flush and then darken. "The fellow's mad!" he yelled, dashing the sheet down on the table. "He'll break his blessed neck!" Marker leaned forward.

"What is it?" he asked. "That-that long owl, Stow," Cliffy explained, "wants me to play. But here, read it yourself." The Fourth-Formers leaned their heads together and read the challenge. Bayne gave vent to a low whistle as he looked up again. "I'll bet it's a trap," he said. "I thought that beggar was taking a rise out of you."

"Taking a rise out of me?" "Yes. There's a lot more in him than you think," the Fourth-Former continued. "He's as thin as a lath, but he's thundering tough. I saw him in the bath this morning, and he swims like a-like an eel!"

"I don't care a hang what he swims like," Clifford bellowed. "You don't really think that am afraid of a scare-crow like him?"

"Don't care what you are," Bayne insisted, tapping the letter slowly. "That's a 'have,' a 'take,' I tell you. And if you take it on, you'll be jolly sorry."

"Oh, go and smother yourself, you beastly croaker! I tell you I can eat the fellow! Him play football on skates! Why, I don't believe he can skate!"

Marker grinned. "You're not exactly a pot at it yourself," he said. "It takes you all your time to go round without coming a cropper. How on earth you will get on trying to kick a ball, goodness only knows!"

"Oh, rats to the pair of you!" cried the boastful captain. "If I jolly well believed what you tell me, I wouldn't be jolly well good for anything. Go on, clear out, the pair of you, and I'll please myself."

Bayne slid from his seat on the table, and followed Marker to the door. As he stepped across the threshold he turned his head.

"It's next Wednesday, Cliffy, isn't it?" he "Buzz off!"

"I must remember the date," Bayne continued, "because because I'll have to arrange for an ambulance!" Clifford made a dart forward, and, picking up a football boot, shied it viciously at his chum's retreating back, but the door was swung to just in the nick of time, and the heavy boot crashed against the panel.

As he retrieved his missile, however, Clifford had a moment to reflect, and it dawned on him that, after all, there might be a deal of truth in his chum's warning.

"He certainly is a wily beggar," he thought, "and he's got that young hound Noble to back him up now. It might be a catch, after all."

He picked up the letter and read it over again. There was a certain cock-sureness about the wording of it which added to the junior captain's suspicions.

"I'm hanged if I'll take it on!" he said. "It -it's beneath my dignity, as captain of the Lower School, to tackle a Third Form fag. I'll take no notice of it."

And, crumpling the sheet in his hand, he threw it in the fire and watched it consume. But he wasn't to get rid of the challenge so easily.

THE 3rd CHAPTER. The Test Match.

the following afternoon Clifford, stalking out of the Fourth Form-room, saw a mighty throng gathered around the notice-board in the hall. Several of the pushing scholars sighted the junior capwere exchanged, made Clifford suspicious.

He came up to the circle and tried to catch sight of the board. Russell saw him, and, with mock courtesy, began to press the crowd back.

"Get away, you little boys!" he howled, thrusting one grinning fag aside. "This way,

Chiffy! Three cheers for Cliffy!" "You dry up, you worm!" the Shell captain growled, wedging his way through the press. "This place is getting like a bear-pit. What have a perfect right to stick up any notice which | are you all doing, howling and jawing round

"Well, if you've got a piece of paper and a Russell waved his hand towards the notice."

"It's for your sweet sake, old chap!" he said. "And we're all very much obliged to you." Clifford allowed his eye to rest on the huge piece of paper, and ran his eyes slowly down the lines.

"To the Third Form. "NOTICE!

"Our stalwart friend and comrade, Leonard Stow, Esq., otherwise known as Lanky, being about to engage in a terrific bout of football on roller-skates against the ever-famous and redoubtable Cliffy, the members of the Third Form, Pelham, are hereby warned that they must turn up on the field of battle, the Asphalt, at two o'clock, on Wednesday next, prompt.

" (Signed) JACK NOBLE. "P.S.-Fourth Form bipeds are also cordially invited to witness the wiping-out of their captain."

So long did Cliffy stand and stare at the extraordinary notice, that the watching fags began to think that he had been suddenly seized with a paralytic fit; but, as a matter of fact, the Shell captain was reading the notice over and over again until its full purport was fixed firmly in his mind. Then, with a howl of anger, he leaped forward and made a grab at the

"Oh, no, you don't!" howled Bob, flinging himself at the junior captain. Valance and Lawson minor also entered the fray. Jack had expected some such outburst, and had posted his men in readiness. Struggling and kicking furiously, Clifford, propelled by the three pairs of sturdy arms, was forced right through the crowd and out of the door.

"I'll tear it down! Lemme go!" he howled. "Oh, no, you won't, my son," said Russell, pantingly. "It-it's a Third Form notice, and you've no right to lay your dirty paws on it!"

Clifford made a noble effort to wedge his way back to the doorway, but he was hopelessly outnumbered, and at last, fairly boiling with rage, he turned and fled.

In less than a couple of hours the news was all round the school, and, as far as Chifford was concerned, the mischief was done.

There were any number of witnesses to prove that it was he who had challenged Stow for both tests; and Lecky, the captain of the school, clinched the matter.

"It's a ripping idea, Clifford!" he said, collaring the junior that same evening. "It'll be a fine thing to watch. I never knew you were so expert at rinking."

"I-I-" stammered Cliffy. "Oh, that's all right, old chap, don't be modest!" the unsuspecting senior said, turning away. "You can rely upon us all being there. We might pick up a tip or two."

"You-you'll probably pick up a bone or two," the unfortunate captain thought ruefully, as he staggered away.

But Liecky's intervention had settled the matter, of course. Win or lose, he would have to face the test.

He had two days before him to perfect himself, and it must be said he stuck to it nobly. In fact, the Fourth-Formers who lived in the same corridor vowed that the stench of Friar's Balsam and ointment proceeding from Clifford's room was more than they could stand, and the tuck-shop at the corner ran out of plaster, owing to Clifford's steady demand. Still, there was one thing pleased him. Stow had not even shown his face on the asphalt patch during the whole of the time.

"The beggar's funking it!" Clifford thought. as he kneaded the embrocation into his aching limbs. "I shouldn't be surprised if he didn't turn up at all."

But at two o'clock on Wednesday afternoon stretch of asphalt, raised a lusty cheer as their I the cycle-shed. champion emerged from the gym. and skated towards the centre, a partly inflated football under his arm.

A couple of goalposts, some six feet apart, had been erected on either side of the patch, and a white line, with an extra big dab of whitening in the centre, divided it. Clifford, standing in a game!" the centre of a group of his chums, watched his rival, and a quick thrill of apprehension ran through him as he saw Stow, with one quick, graceful bend of his body, swing round on the outside edge of his skates and halt dead on the line. The watching fags also noted the skill of the movement, and a general murmur ran round.

"Did you twig that, my son?" Bob muttered. "My hat, that follow's no dud at this game!"

Martin, a Sixth-Former, sauntered out to the centre of the patch, with a whistle in his hand and a grin on his face. He beckoned to Clifford, and the latter began to shuffle towards him. The difference between his progress and that of his rival was too apparent to pass unobserved.

"It's grace and disgrace!" was Lawson minor's pithy verdict. By a violent effort Clifford managed to pull up within a pace or two from the ball.

"There isn't much rules about this," the Sixth-Former said, glancing at the two rivals. "The edge of the asphalt is touch, and the ball has to be chucked in if it goes over. There's no holding or clinching allowed, and every time a goal's scored the ball has to be centred. Now, get back six paces each of you." A swift glide on the outside edge backwards brought Stow to distance, but Clifford had to stump back like a carthorse backing into a shed. A titter of laughter went round at his ungainly display.

"Are you ready?" asked the referee. Clifford bent forward, his eyes fixed on the Pheep!

Now, there are many things possible on rollerskates, but a sudden leap forward is not one of them. Clifford dived for the ball, but his feet shot away from behind him, and he landed on the asphalt with a thud which fairly made his teeth rattle.

"Brave! Good old Cliffy!" yelled the delighted fags. "Do it again!"

Stow had swirled forward, tapping the ball with his left foot, and as Clifford sat up, panting for breath, his rival, taking a long, steady circle on his right foot, went swerving past, dribbling the ball as he went.

"Buck up, Cliffy! Get up, man!" howled the Fourth-Formers.

Clifford, with a mighty effort, raised himself to his feet, and went rolling down towards the goal. Stow was now swinging along by the touchline within a couple of feet or so of the watchers. The way he managed the ball was a revelation, and a long yell of delight went up. "Centre it! Centre it!"

Nearing the goal, Lanky swerved in. Clifford was now within a few yards from his citadel, and made a frantic effort to turn in order to stop the shot, but half-way round, Stow, with a quick bend of his left foot, caught the ball with his toe, lashing it straight into the junior captain's face.

There was a wild yell, and Clifford, with the ball clasped in his arms, went sailing backward right through his own goal.

"Goal! Goal!" "Ha, ha! He's scored it himself!"

"Is that one to Cliffy, or one to Stow?" bawled Bob, fairly dancing with delight.

The referee blew his whistle, and pointed to the centre of the field.

"One goal for Stow!" he cried, with a grin. Clifford, with a face like a beetroot, came back through his own goal, still hugging the ball. He brought it to the centre line and dropped it, scowling at his lean rival as he did so.

"You-you caught me unaware!" he grunted. "Right you are, old chap," said Stow. "It'll be your turn next time."

And when the whistle shrilled again, the Third-Former made no effort to move forward. Clifford skated towards the ball as hard as he could pelt, and when within a foot or so of it, just managed to tap it aside. Stow turned quickly, and shot off to the right, allowing Clifford a clear run.

The meaning of the movement was not quite clear, and the watching Shell began to raise Two Solid Silver Challenge Cups (Senior and Junior) | their voices to cheer on their champion.

"Now then, Cliffy! This time, my son!" Clifford went for the goal as though it were a mile race instead of a matter of about thirty yards. The soft ball bounded gaily along in front of him, but it was not quite in line with the goal, and, putting on a spurt, Clifford closed

"Come on, Stow! Stop him, man!" the anxious fags yelled.

Stow turned his head, and his eyes caught those of Noble. A quick glance was exchanged.

"Oh, he's something up his sleeve!" Jack said to Mac. "You watch Cliffy! Ha, hathere! What did I say?"

"My hat!" " O-o-oh!"

Within three yards from the open goal Clifford reached the ball, and, forgetting himself for a moment, aimed one of his quick, swinging kicks at it. Even a professional would hesitate at such a reckless act. To Clifford the consequences were absolutely disastrous. His foot missed the ball entirely, and swung right up over his head. So swift was the speed at which he was travelling, although he began falling two yards from the goal, he did not land on his back until he the crowd of fags gathered around the white | was right through it, hard up again the wall of

A curious sight was seen around the field. Everyone was simply doubled up with laughter, even the referee dropping his whistle and gurgling until the tears ran down his cheeks.

"He-he think he's the ball!" panted Russell, holding his shaking sides. "Oh, my hat! What

For a good three seconds Clifford lay where he had fallen, his back on the asphalt, and both feet sticking up on the wall. He wasn't quite sure what had happened, and looked wonderingly at the red bricks between his feet. Some- L one, however, came forward and righted him, and with a heart-rending groan the junior scrambled dizzily on to his skates again.

"Th-that's a throw-in!" the referee breathed, waving his hand towards Clifford.

"Is it?" the sore junior groaned. "Oh, no, it ain't! It's a jolly throw-out, and I'm the chap that's thrown out. I've had enough of this rotten game!"

Stow skated up to him, and pulled up sharp. "But you haven't finished yet, Cliffy!" he said. "The game's only just started!"

"Hang you! Hang the game! And hang the-" Again the treacherous skates shot away from beneath him, and he thudded on to the hard asphalt. "And hang the beastly skates!" he howled, tearing viciously at the leather straps.

First one and then the other was torn from its fastenings, and thrown violently on to the asphalt.

"Then you've had enough?" Stow asked. The junior captain only looked at him, but his looks spoke louder than words.

Lanky Stow had beaten his challenger hands down.

THE END.

(Another grand complete Jack Noble yarn in next week's fine number of THE BOYS' REALM.)

THE BOYS' REALM" CRICKET LEAGUE.

Great Organisation Founded for the Benefit of Bonafide Junior Cricket Clubs Throughout the British Isles.

SOLID SILVER CUPS, HUNDREDS OF SILVER MEDALS, and DOZENS OF HANDSOME BATS To be Given Away.

CRICKET SECRETARIES NOTE!

ENTRANCE FEES!

Carefully read the Rules and Regulations below, and if your Club is eligible, and you desire to enter for Our Great, Free Competition, fill in the printed form (FOR UNATTACHED CLUBS), and forward it, with a list of your fixtures, and a letter from your President, to THE SECRETARY, THE BOYS' REALIN League, 23, Bouverie Street, London, E.C.

offered to Bona-fide Cricket Clubs of not less than one year's standing.

The First Division Cup will be presented to the Team (the average age of members of which must not exceed twenty) which puts up the best performances in their Saturday matches only played between May and Sept-

SOLID SILVER MEDAL for Each Member of the Runners-up.

A HANDSOME CRICKET SET will also be awarded to the Third and Fourth Teams at the end of the season.

The Second Division or Junior Cup will be presented to the Team (the average age of the members of which must not exceed sixteen) which puts up the best series of performances in their Saturday matches played between May and September.

SUBSCRIPTION!

SOLID SILVER MEDAL for Each Member of the Runners-up.

A FIRST-CLASS CRICKET SET will also be awarded to the Third and Fourth Teams in the Junior Cup Competition at the end of the season.

In addition to the above, a handsome cricket bat will be awarded each week in both divisions to the club which, in the opinion of the Editor, has put up the best show on the preceding Saturday. In all cases the Editor's decision is final.

RULES AND REGULATIONS.

- (a) Only clubs which have been established at least 1 (d) The cup and medals will be presented at the end one season (exclusive of 1910) are eligible for entry, and the respectability and standing of the club must be vouched for by some responsible
- Where clubs have two or more teams, only the premier team matches will count.
- (c) Clubs desirous of entering this contest may make application now. In doing so, a list of their engagements between the dates mentioned above, with the names and addresses of the secretaries of the opposing clubs, and a letter from the president of the club, should be sent to the Secretary, BOYS' REALM Cricket League, 23, Bouverie Street, London, E.C.
- of the cricket season to the clubs in each section which your Editor, the Secretary, and another umpire consider to hold the best records in the matches played between the dates stated above.
- (e) Strict investigation will be made by the controllers of the League into the bona-fides of the entering clubs and their fixtures.
- (f) All matches to be played under the official rules of cricket.
- (g) The cups to be won outright.
- (h) Opposing teams must, in every case, be of the same average age.

THIS FORM FOR SINGLE UNATTACHED CLUBS ONLY.

Date
Playing Ground
Average Age of Members
Colours
The above club is desirous of entering THE BOYS' REALM CRICKET members agree to conform to the conditions governing the contest, of Your Editor, the Secretary, and a referee in any case of dispute.
Secretary's Name	ADDRESS OF THE PROPERTY OF THE Address
,我们就是一个人,我们就是一个人的,我们就是一个人的,我们就是一个人的,我们就是一个人的,我们就是一个人的,我们就是一个人的,我们就是一个人的,我们就是一个人的

SILVER CUPS FOR CRICKET LEAGUES.

Your Editor is also prepared to present a Number of Solid Silver Challenge Cups to Certain Bona-fide Cricket Leagues throughout the country. Secretaries of Leagues desirous to possess one of these Handsome Trophies should make application now. Form of application will be found below.

The Following are the Conditions under which the Cups Will be Given:

I. The Leagues must play the game according to Official Rules of cricket.

II. Each League must be a properly constituted League, in which the clubs engage in a genuine competition. III. Each form of entry must be accompanied by full particulars of the competition, which must be of one season's standing, or, if formed this season, must be accompanied by proof that it is a genuine competition.

120			4 5 3 5
	THIS	FORM	FOR	CRICKET	LEAGUES	ONLY.

Year of Formation .............. Number of Clubs in League ...... Secretary's Name and Address ......

This form, together with full particulars of the League, to be addressed to the Secretary, THE BOYS' REALM CRICKET LEAGUE, 23, Bouverie Street, London, E.C.

JOIN AT ONCE. DON'TO BEAN

See "The Boys' Herald"—1d. Now on Sale, Everywhere! " Ben Bold at Ba