The Grey friars Stories w.o.g. lofts in the Popular w.o.g. lofts

Lists typed and compiled by D. J. ADLEY

When Eric Fayne wrote his most excellent article in the 1950 C.D. Annual entitled 'The Popular Popular' he mentioned the fact 'that it was probably the most remarkable periodical that ever appeared'. Having studied the whole run of this paper these last six months I could not agree with Eric more on this point.

Whatever the size of its circulation, the 'Popular' could not help but make money for the Amalgamated Press, the simple fact being that the majority of stories and illustrations had appeared in previous periodicals, and therefore the cost of producing such a publication was very low indeed.

I have been told on good authority, that it was originally intended to call the 'Penny Popular' the 'Penny Popular of Popular Stories' but it was thought that this title was too long winded - so just 'Penny Popular' it was named. When I interviewed Mr. C.M. Down last year he maintained that the Magnet's circulation was always larger than the 'Gem's' - but if this was so, why did they reprint the 'Gem' stories first in the 'Penny Popular' when the main object of the paper was to reproduce for the public the three most popular characters or sets of characters in the Amalgamated Press fiction for juveniles - Sexton Blake; Jack, Sam, & Pete and Tom Merry & Co.? Here is the first mystery in the most unusual paper ever to appear.

Although the 'Penny Popular' may have been popular with readers, it certainly was not with contributors, as hardly any work was required from them. The job of cutting, and rewriting the stories was the work of two sub-editors, William Stanton Hope and Arthur Aldcroft, both of whom are still alive, and I have corresponded with them quite recently. Charles Hamilton was paid the sum of £2. 2. 0. as an honorarium for every Greyfriars story published, though this was a very poor fee, taking into consideration the amount of money that the Amalgamated Press made out of his tales.

After a long close study of the reprinted stories of Greyfriars, I cannot help wondering how they could have been at all popular with readers. Drastically abridged, disjointed, and with often the best parts of Hamilton cut out, as a very keen reader of the 'Magnet' I found them unsatisfactory from every point of view. Indeed, many of the original chapters of 13 which had appeared in the 'Magnet' had somehow been cut down to 6! A classical example of this is P.P. (New Series) No. 114, which was taken from 'Magnet' No. 184 where Lord Mauleverer came to Greyfriars.

The 1st Series of the 'Penny Popular' Greyfriars stories, were very easy to find in the 'Magnet' as not only were many of the titles the same, but the stories followed in some form of sequence, but towards the end of the first series it became obvious to the editor that the Greyfriars stories were far from being popular with readers, mainly because they had read them previously. There were it seems readers with either long memories of the stories, or else they had collections of back numbers, and something had to be done to keep these readers' interests alive. Confirmation of this was given in an issue of the 'Magnet' in 1919, when an announcement appeared as follows:

"Lots of people have refrained from buying the Penny Popular each week in the past, because they have already read the stories appearing therein. Entirely new and original stories will appear from next week"

Now it is perfectly true that the stories which did appear were new and original, but they were not written by Charles Hamilton. They were, with one exception, written by G.R. Samways who in the opinion of H.A. Hinton and C.M. Down was the best of the substitute writers at that period. The reason why Mr. Hamilton did not write the new stories is obvious, as he only wrote approximately 37 stories for the 'Magnet' in the period 1919/20, and he could not possibly be expected to keep a regular output going for the 'Penny Popular' when the 'Magnet' was lacking material from his clever pen.

H.A. Hinton the editor, suggested to Mr. Samways that it might be a good idea to have the Remove chums play the various counties at cricket, a theme which had proved very popular with readers of Sexton Blake in the 'Union Jack' and Jack, Sam & Pete in the 'Marvel', when these characters had visited various real life towns — to the great delight of the local readers. There has been much criticism of these stories, which featured Dennis Carr, by some collectors, and it is not my intention to try and alter their views. But the main thing which mattered was that the stories at least satisfied the juvenile readers at that time, as they ran for nearly two years.

With the starting of the Holiday Annual in 1920, 'Billy Bunter's Weekly', 'Greyfriars Herald', 'Tom Merry's Weekly' and many other contributions for the companion papers to write, Mr. Samways in time found it impossible to keep up this regular story for the 'Popular' each week and wrote his last story in No. 101, dated Xmas Day, 1920.

It was then decided to start reprinting the old stories again, but this time with a difference, as the editorial policy was to try and make these newly rehashed stories as 'New' to the reader as possible. With different titles from those which had appeared in the 'Magnet' and often starting a story in the eighth or later chapters, these stories were not at all easy to trace, as apart from all this, instead of going in some sort of sequence which would have been easy to the researcher, the stories jumped about all over the place from 'Magnet' 605 back to 493 then on to 607, 610, and then 672. Many a weary hour I have spent searching through Vols of Magnets to try and trace a story which I knew would bear not much resemblance to its new appearance in the 'Popular'. I remember with some amusement reading a cricket story in the 'Popular' and then finding that its original form was about a football match.

In the list, stories written by other writers than Charles Hamilton, have the correct name of the author beside them. Regarding 'Magnet' No. 672 the double Xmas number for 1920, I should like to point out that this is a genuine story by Mr. Hamilton. Apart from the chief-sub-editor of the 'Magnet' confirming this, it also has been proved by official records to have been written by the genuine 'Frank Richards'.

about this - by a perusal of 'Harry Wharton's Trust'.

So, in closing my foreword on the Greyfriars reprints in the 'Popular', although I would not recommend to any reader to collect the paper for the reprinted stories, I feel I could do no better, than to say that for a collector of all types of Charles Hamilton's stories, one could buy the 'Popular' alone for the really superb Rio Kid yarns. These were all original, and I must confess that I spent more time than I should have done, in reading many of them and they were to my mind easily the best stories to appear in the 'Popular'.
