

THE SCHOOLGIRLS' OWN LIBRARY

By Dennis L. Bird

These attractive little books were published by the Amalgamated Press (1922) Ltd. for some 35 years, in two sequences. The first series, with black and white drawings on a yellow cover, ran from November 1922 until the sudden wartime paper shortage forced them to suspend publication in June 1940, just as the Battle of Britain was about to begin. This first series began with 64 pages, but this very soon went up to 96 pages throughout the 1920s and 1930s; the price - surprisingly, in comparison with present times - remained fixed at 4d (just under 2 new pence) from November 1922 until January 1940, when it went up to 4½ d. The second series ran after World War 11 from October 1946 until September 1963; the books now had a cover in full colour, and contained 96 pages to begin with. However, by the summer of 1947 the size had been reduced to 64 pages. The price began at 7d (about 3p); by 1951 it was 8d, and by 1955 it had risen to 9d. The cost per volume went up to 10d with No. 231 (March 1956) and to a shilling (5p) with No 311 in August 1959; it thereafter remained the same until the end, in 1963.

The first series began with one book a month, from November 1922. From February 1923 this was increased to two a month, and then to three a month from October 1925. The series reached its maximum rate of issue - four a month - from February 1929 until the wartime shutdown in June 1940, when only two titles came out. The second series, 1946 to 1963, issued two books a month throughout its existence, except for an experiment in the summers of 1954, 1955, & 1956. In the July and August of each of those years, there were three books a month, but evidently there was insufficient support to continue at that rate.

The page size from 1922 until almost the end (January 1963) was 5½ inches by seven inches, with two columns per page. Just for the last few months, however, from No 395 (February 1963) until No 410 (September 1963) there were single-column pages measuring 4½" x 7¼".

Nearly all the first-series books were reprints of serials which had appeared in the weekly papers, although there was usually one book a month which had been specially written for the Schoolgirls Own Library. The Morcove School and Cliff House School serials were a rich source of material; between 1923 and 1940 no less than 94 Schoolgirls Own Library books were about Morcove, and 54 told of Cliff House. In contrast, the second series relied progressively less and less on reprints, and much more on specially-written stories. From 1956 there were hardly any reprints. Nevertheless, although they were more original, the second series somehow lacked the charm of the old "yellow books," and after 1963 they (and the weekly papers) ceased to be proper stories and became just strip cartoons.

The main credit for all the research that has gone into this list belongs to two men: Arthur J. Southway of Cape Province, South Africa, and Ray Hopkins of Oadby, Leicestershire. Mr Hopkins is well known to readers of "Collectors' Digest," and has been of enormous help.

Two other books were announced for June 6, 1940: No 734, The Menace of the Masks (Valerie Drew), by Isabel Norton (SW 1938), and No 735, Secret Leader of the Rebel Four, by Gail Western (GC 1938). Instead, only Nos 732 and 733 appeared, each bearing on the back the following announcement:

"THE EDITOR VERY MUCH REGRETS that with this issue 'The Schoolgirls' Own Library' is forced to suspend publication. As you may know, the majority of the wood pulp from which paper is manufactured in Great Britain comes from Scandinavia. Owing to the extension of the war to Norway exports of pulp from that country have entirely ceased. So acute has the shortage of paper become in consequence that it has been found quite impossible to continue publication at the present time. It is hoped, however, that this suspension will only be for a limited period, and that the 'Libraries' will resume their appearance in the future. The Editor is sure that when they do, you will support them as loyally as you have done in the past."

The S.G.O.L. did eventually resume in 1946, and Secret Leader of the Rebel Four was its first number. The Menace of the Masks, sadly, never appeared.
